TO EXPLODE BIG DYNAMITE CHARGE

Expert will Blow out Rock at Quarry. Expects to Avoid Any Semblance of Shock in the Town.

Within the next twenty four hours almost a ton and a half of dynamite will be exploded within a short distance of Gettysburg. This startling announcement loses all its alarming character when it is told that it will be put off thirty three feet underground, that the explosion will be in charge of an expert who says that the force of the charge will scarcely be felt in the town, and that Gettysburg will not realize that anything unusual is occurring.

For some time past E. L. Dick, who has leased the Smith stone quarries east of town, has had steam drills at work boring holes in the rock. Four holes, each one thirty three feet in depth, have been drilled and are now ready to receive the dynamite. Six hundred pounds of the explosive will be placed in each one of the holes, and if the gentleman in charge of the work feels that this is not sufficient to accomplish the desired result, more will be added.

The expert, who will set off the big discharge, is expected to arrive here this evening. He will attend to the work of placing the dynamite and arranging the wires. All four loads will be exploded at one time from a single battery and the work is said to be so carefully arranged that all possibility of any tremor being felt is removed.

On Thursday the uploading of the dynamite from the freight car in which it was brought to Gettysburg was successfully carried out by several of Mr. Dick's employees. Two or three colored men had been secured to assist in the work but, when they discovered the character of the car's contents, they at once decided that they preferred employment elsewhere. The explosive was taken to the Dick quarries during the day and a guard placed over it so that there might be no danger of a premature blast. The undertaking is one of the most extensive of its sort that Gettysburg has had for some time, the dynamite alone costing in the neighborhood of $150. It is expected that the charge will be set off about ten o'clock Saturday morning.

WILL RESUME WORK

Dr. Dunbar Able to Take up Preaching again.

Friends of Rev. Dr. William H. Dunbar, who has been absent from his pulpit in St. Mark's Lutheran church, Baltimore, since last December on account of a nervous breakdown, will be delighted to learn that he has almost entirely recovered his health and expects to take charge of his pastoral duties the second week in September, said the Baltimore American this morning.

He will preach his first sermon since his attack more than eight months ago, on the second Sunday in September.

Since last May, Dr. Dunbar has been at Blue Ridge Summit with his family, where he owns a cottage.

WILL MEET FOR FARMERS' DAY

Expect to Secure Several Bands, Entertainment Features and Other Attractions. Will Arrange an Extensive Premium List.

A call for the business men of Gettysburg, and all others interested, is made for Monday evening at 7:30 when preliminary steps will be taken looking toward the annual Farmers' Day celebration in October. The meeting will be held in the Law Library of the Court House. It is called at the instance of C. B. Dougherty and J. Frank Hartman, who were named some months ago as a committee to make suggestions for the 1915 event.

It is proposed on Monday evening to select the date, to arrange for the financing of the affair, the securing of bands and entertainment features, and to outline the premium lists. A vast amount of detail work is connected with the Farmers' Day plans and this will all be divided and assigned.

Business men consulted this morning regarding the plans for the event agree that there must be plenty of music all during the day, and two or more bands will be engaged to attend to this end of the entertainment. Efforts will again be made to secure attractions from one of the nearby fairs in order to give the celebration all the holiday aspect possible.

The preparations are getting an earlier start this year than previously and it is believed that a more complete and varied premium list can be arranged as a result. Farmers and truckers stated last fall that some of their best products failed to appear in the list of things for which prizes were offered and these suggestions will be taken into account in arranging this year's proposed awards.

GOES STEP HIGHER

Howard will now Pitch for the Harrisburg Internationals.

Earl Howard went to Harrisburg this morning to finish the base ball season with the International team of that city. He is subject to call by Gettysburg next spring, unless Brooklyn drafts him according to persistent rumors which come from Major League circles. Howard was worked hard from start to finish of the season. That he did not have a longer list of victories to his credit was due to the fact that he was always pitted against the best pitchers, and his own team-mates could not make runs for him. No less than five of the games Howard pitched were lost by 1 to 0 scores. He is recognized all over the Blue Ridge Circuit as one of the strongest men in Class D base ball and his many friends here are sure he will continue his career so successfully started.

NEW RULING

Should Wrap Automobile Casings with Centre Open.

Orders received at the Gettysburg post office this morning are to the effect that all automobile tires, within the prescribed weight, may be received for shipment by parcel post providing they are wrapped only around the casing and the space in the center is left open. The Department regards all such tires as coming within the size limit.

Attention is again called to the necessity of all parcels bearing the name and address of the sender, preceded by the word "From."

FOR WEBB DEDICATION

JOHN ZIEGLER'S INJURIES FATAL

Died after Lying a Little over Twenty Four Hours. Had been Examined by Harrisburg Surgeon on Monday.

From injuries received about midnight Wednesday when he was thrown from the running board of an automobile, John S. Ziegler died at his home on Chambersburg street at three o'clock this morning.

Mr. Ziegler lost his hold on the machine as it swerved to avoid a pile of bricks on York street and fell heavily on the bricks receiving a severe concussion of the brain. A local physician attended him and secured in consultation Dr. George B. Kunkel, of Harrisburg, who examined the patient Thursday afternoon, and agreed that his condition was serious. It was believed by the family, however, that he would recover and his death at an early hour this morning was a surprise to them and to his friends.

Mr. Ziegler was born in Gettysburg thirty four years ago. He was the youngest child of Mr. and Mrs. William T. Ziegler, of Springs avenue. He attended Gettysburg College and spent practically his entire life here with the exception of a short time when he was engaged in business in Carlisle. For several years he has been conducting the Ziegler jewelry store on Chambersburg street, and the cigar store and pool room adjoining.

Mr. Ziegler leaves his parents; his wife, who before marriage was Miss Marie Armstrong, of Carlisle, and two small children, Rebecca and Thomas. He also leaves two sisters and two brothers, Mrs. J. D. Lippy, Miss Mame Ziegler, and Charles T. Ziegler, Bloomington, Illinois. The funeral will be held on Monday morning at 10:30. Interment will be made in Evergreen cemetery.

MRS. WHERLEY WINTRODE

Mrs. Elizabeth Wintrode, widow of the late Wherley Wintrode, died Tuesday morning, from a stroke of paralysis at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Frank Bucher, in Mt. Joy township.

She was aged 76 years, 4 months, and 10 days and leaves the following children: Landis Wintrode, Union township; Mrs. Frank Hoover, near Hanover; Mrs. Frank Bucher, Mt. Joy township; and Mrs. M. A. L. Trostle, Union township. She also leaves the following brothers and sisters: Enoch Miller, of Enola; Jacob Miller, of Germany township; John Miller, William Miller and Simon P. Miller, of Mt. Joy township; Mrs. Mandilla Breighner, of Littlestown; Mrs. Jesse Snyder and Mrs. Agnes Snyder, of Mt. Joy township; Mrs. Sarah Yealy, of Harney, and Mrs. Annie Streig, of Mt. Pleasant, Md.

The funeral was held Thursday morning, with services in St. James Reformed church, Rev. Dr. F. S. Lindaman officiating. Interment in the cemetery adjoining the church.

EICHOLTZ—MOIR

Wedding in New Oxford. Honeymoon Trip to Niagara Falls.

Miss Elizabeth M. Moir and C. L. Eicholtz, both of New Oxford, were married at the home of the bride on Thursday evening at nine o'clock by Dr. R. S. Oyler. They left for York shortly after the ceremony, and after a trip to Niagara Falls and other places will return to New Oxford where Mr. Eicholtz is successfully engaged in business.

THEATRE AGAIN CHANGES HANDS

Mrs. Walter Purchases Property. Present Proprietors of Popular Playhouse will Continue to Conduct it. Slight Advance.

Walter's Theatre was sold on Thursday by Amos J. Collins to Mrs. John F. Walter for $11,500. Mr. Collins several weeks ago purchased the place at an assignee's sale for $11,400.

Mrs. Walter gets possession of the well known playhouse on September first. When J. L. Williams, Esq., assignee of the Walter Estate, sold the theatre to Mr. Collins several weeks ago, the lease was continued, and it is understood that Mrs. Walter will again continue to rent the property to Miller and Ziegler, who are the present proprietors.

In view of the transfer of Thursday, the largest creditor of the Walter estate withdrew his request that the furnishings of the theatre be sold by the assignee, and the announced sale will accordingly not take place.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter have been residing in Hanover recently, though their household furniture is still here and they contemplate coming back to Gettysburg in the near future and making this their permanent home.

FAMILY REUNION

Miller Family Gathered with Friends on Thursday.

A family reunion was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Miller Thursday. The following were present, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Miller, Mr. and Mrs. William Miller, of East Berlin; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kelly, of McKnightstown; Mr. and Mrs. Singleton Myers, of Biglerville; Mrs. Clara Raffensperger, of Arendtsville; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Myers and daughter, Cora, of York Springs; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Eisenhart and daughter, Mary, of East Berlin; Isaac Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Miller and children, Margaret, Julia, and Ruth, of Greenfield; Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Miller and children, Charles, Frank, Annie, Elva, Erdis and Dorothy, of McKnightstown; Mrs. Margaret Rosensteel and son, Frank, and grandson, Curtis Plank, of Round Top; Mr. and Mrs. Ross Knipple and son, William, of Mummaburg; Mrs. Nellie Shetron, of Harrisburg; and Annie Plank.

ECHO OF ACCIDENT

Holly Cars Must Control Speed at Curve Near the Inn.

Ordering the Carlisle and Mt. Holly Railway Company to "operate its cars over the curve south of Mt. Holly Inn at such a rate of speed as to be always under the control of the operator and give proper warning of their approach" and to erect signs to notify the public that the track is laid upon a private right-of-way, and declaring that no fenders, regardless of the design, would have prevented the accident, the Public Service Commission has just issued an order on the Carlisle and Mt. Holly trolley company.

The order was made after investigation of charges made by the Rev. Floyd Appleton, of Harrisburg, following the death of his mother, who was killed by a Holly car as it was rounding the curve at the Holly Inn about a year ago.

ARE IMPROVING LOCAL CHURCH

Conveniences Installed at Methodist Church. Entrance Made Attractive. Testing Roof Preparatory to Proposed Frescoing.

A number of improvements in course of completion at the local Methodist church are adding materially to the beauty and convenience of the building. The council is now considering the installation of a steam heating plant to be ready for use during the coming winter. The church for some years has been heated by hot air furnaces.

The walls of the hall leading to the lecture room and the main auditorium have been refrescoed and all of the woodwork is repainted. The floors have been oiled and other things done to make the approach to the interior of the building most attractive.

Repairs have been made to the roof which was leaking in various places and the roof will now be given a thorough trial. If it is shown that it is perfectly secure the congregation will next take up the matter of refrescoing the main auditorium. They do not wish to incur the expense and have the walls damaged by water. Another improvement to the church is the installation of a sanitary bubbling drinking fountain.

Dr. Oyler has returned from his vacation and union services will be conducted in the church Sunday evening.

FAIRFIELD

Mr. Smyser and family, of York, are spending some time with Harry Sent and family.

SUE ESTATE

Seek to Recover Money Man, now Dead, Took from Bank.

The following is taken from the Weekly Graphic: "The First National Bank, of Honey Brook, through its counsel has filed suit against Mrs. Belle C. Ramsey, executrix of the late G. L. Ramsey, late of Honey Brook, to recover $7,500, which amount, it is alleged in the statement, the deceased had pilfered from the bank without knowledge of the officials, from 1892 to 1913. Mr. Ramsey was during that time employed in the bank." Mr. Paul G. Hartman, formerly of Littlestown, and a son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Hartman, is cashier of the above named bank.

Germany to Change Policy of Submarine Warfare.

WILL MEET U. S. DEMANDS

Chancellor Says Amends for American Lives Lost on Arabic Will be Made if U-Boat Commander Exceeded Instructions.

Berlin, Aug. 27.—It is said on the best authority that the Arabic incident may be considered as eliminated as a source of discord between Germany and America; or at least, is regarded by the German government in that light.

Moreover, Germany, in its desire to continue its friendly relations with the United States, had adopted before the sinking of the Arabic a policy designed to settle completely the whole submarine problem, as affecting America, on the basis of good-will and mutual understanding.

This is shown by the statement of Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg, particularly by his concluding remarks to the effect that not until all the circumstances in connection with the sinking of the Arabic had been cleared up would it be possible to say "whether the commander of one of our submarines went beyond his instructions," in which case Germany would give complete satisfaction to the United States.

Furthermore during the conversation, the chancellor twice again referred to the instructions given to submarine commanders. He did not specify in detail the nature of these instructions, but it may be said they are designed to prevent a repetition of the Lusitania case, and to provide the opportunity for escape for American non-combatants upon torpedoed ships, which the United States desires.

Having given these instructions, Germany asked suspension of judgment on the Arabic case until the facts were ascertained, being confident it will be shown that the sinking of the vessel was not an unprovoked attack without warning by a German submarine, but was attributable either to a mine explosion or to some action of the vessel itself. Should it develop, however, that a submarine acted contrary to instructions, ample reparation will be offered.

Germany is still unable to understand why Americans in these troubled times travel on belligerent ships instead of taking American or other neutral steamships, but since they in some instances insist upon taking passage on vessels belonging to belligerents, Germany will do its utmost to provide for their safety.

It is not permissible to quote remarks made by the chancellor in the course of the conversation, other than the formal statement which he made. It may be said, however, that Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg showed genuine interest in the state of feeling in the United States concerning the sinking of the Arabic, and expressed hope that the American people would not form an opinion on the basis of conflicting statements giving only one side of the story. He spoke with emphasis of Germany's desire to maintain the friendship of America.

AEROPLANE SINKS U-BOAT

Bomb Dropped From Air Destroys Submarine Skirting Belgian Coast.

London, Aug. 27.—A German submarine has been destroyed near Ostend, Belgium, by a bomb dropped by an aeroplane. Official announcement to this effect was made here.

The text of the statement follows: "The secretary of the admiralty announces that Squadron Commander Arthur W. Bigsforth, R. N., destroyed single-handed a German submarine by bombs dropped from an aeroplane. The submarine was observed to be completely wrecked and sank off Ostend."

"It is not the practice of the admiralty to publish statements regarding the losses of German submarines, important though they have been, in cases where the enemy has no other source of information as to the time and place at which these losses have occurred."

"In the case referred to above, however, the brilliant feat of Squadron Commander Bigsforth was performed in the immediate neighborhood of the coast in occupation of the enemy, and the position of the sunken submarine has been located by a German destroyer."

Russians Use Japanese Guns.

62 AIRSHIPS MAKE WAR'S BIGGEST RAID

French Aviators Attack Munition Factories.

Paris, Aug. 27.—The greatest air raid since the war began reported by the French war office.

Dillingen, in Rhenish Prussia, was attacked by sixty-two aeroplanes of the French.

One hundred and fifty bombs were dropped upon the town. Great damage was done to the blast furnaces and arms factories.

Dillingen is twenty-eight miles south of Treves and since the war broke out has been an important manufacturing center in western Germany for war supplies. Its great furnaces and mills at the outbreak of the war were all turned into arms and munition factories.

The raid is thus officially described. "On August 24 one of our aviators bombarded the railway station at Offenbach, in the grand duchy of Baden, Germany."

"On the following day a fleet of four separate squadrons of aeroplanes—sixty-two in all—flew over Dillingen, where is located factories for the manufacture of shells and armor plate."

"More than 100 shells of large calibre were dropped by the French aviators with 'terrific precision.'"

The remainder of the French official statement, dealing with land operations along the western front, reads: "During part of Wednesday night there were artillery exchanges and fighting with hand grenades and other explosives in the Artois district, in the vicinity of Souchez and Neuville."

"Around Roye there had been continued activity on the part of the enemy's artillery as well as our own."

"In the Argonne district, in the sector of 'La Fille Morte,' say fairly severe fighting with bombs and hand grenades."

"Nothing of importance has been reported from the remainder of the front."

JAPAN RUSHES MUNITIONS

Special Factories are Established for Manufacture of Shells.

Tokio, Aug. 27.—The establishment of special factories for the manufacture of shells will be a part of the increased assistance which Japan has decided to give her allies in the war, it is learned.

Details of the plans for carrying on the work of increasing Japan's munition supplies have been discussed by the ambassadors of the entente powers with Premier Okuma, the diplomats going in a body from the summer embassies at Chuzenji to Nikko for the purpose, following the premier's recent audience with the emperor.

GERMANS TAKE BREST-LITOVSK

Teutons Capture Russian Fortress by Storm.

MUSCOVITES ARE FLEEING

Von Mackensen in Command of the Victorious Armies—Grand Duke Nicholas Loses Pivot of New Defence Line.

Berlin, by wireless to Sayville, L. I., Aug. 27.—The Russian fortress of Brest-Litovsk has been captured by Teutonic forces. Announcement to this effect was made by the army headquarters staff.

Field Marshal von Mackensen directed the troops which invested the stronghold.

German and Austro-Hungarian troops stormed the works on the western and northwestern front and succeeded in entering the center fortress. The Russians, the statement adds, then gave up the fortress.

The victory is considered one of the most brilliant since the war began.

Brest-Litovsk was the pivot of the second Russian line of defence. It was one of the strongest fortresses in Europe, and lies immediately east of Warsaw. It is 131 miles south of Grodno. Five important railway lines pass through Brest-Litovsk.

With Brest-Litovsk in possession of the Germans and Grodno threatened with immediate capture the Russians are now expected to retire for 150 miles before they attempt to make a serious stand to stem the Austro-German invasion of interior Russia.

Grodno is the only fortress remaining in the hands of the Russians upon their second line and it is reported that the evacuation of that stronghold is under way. The glory for the capture of Brest-Litovsk goes to Prince Leopold, of Bavaria, whose Bavarian troops took Warsaw and von Mackensen, whose group of armies worked north on both sides of the Bug river, smashing the Russian lines wherever the Slav forces made a stand.

The great swamp region east of the Bug and northeast of Wlodawa, which the Russians thought would check the advance of the Teutonic forces were crossed at the rate of five miles a day. Engineers worked day and night building bridges and plank roads over which the big guns were carried.

Austro-Hungarian troops played an important part in the capture of Brest-Litovsk. Cavalry armies under General von Koenigs and General Lubillo drove northward from the Lublin-Chelm-Kovel line and in the rear of Brest-Litovsk.

Finally, when only one railway line remained in possession of the Russians, and their defences on the western side of the city were smashed by the German forces, the order was given to retreat.

The pursuit of the Russians east of Brest-Litovsk is going on vigorously.

Bolter in Maryland Canning Factory Bursts; 14 Injured.

Cambridge, Md., Aug. 27.—As a result of the explosion of the bolter in the canning house of R. L. Simmon & Co., at Andrews, Lower Dorchester, Dewey Robbins was killed, while his sister, who was working near by, was badly scalded she may die.

A number of other persons who were working close to the bolter were scalded and some were struck by flying pieces of the bolter, but none was reported as being seriously injured.

The total injured number fourteen. At this time no one seems to be able to account for the accident.

AMERICANS LEAVE GERMANY

Fear Arabic Sinking May Cause Severeance of Relations.

Rotterdam, Aug. 27.—Scores of Americans are hastening from Germany, fearing that relations between the United States and the Berlin government may be severed.

Many commercial agents have been instructed by the concerns they represent to return to England immediately.

Americans who arrived sail no discourtesy to citizens of the United States had been shown in Berlin.

Woman Kills an Artist.

New York, Aug. 27.—Clasping her young baby, Mrs. Rose Trano, 20 years old, stood in a Brooklyn hallway and shot to death James Monerly, 28 years old, an artist and musician. Still holding the baby, the young woman went out on the sidewalk and gave her revolver to a passing policeman. "My two children were without food," she said, "and when Monerly refused to help me, I shot him."

Chilean Legislator Killed in Duel.

Santiago, Chile, Aug. 27.—Senator Bahamondes, a member of the chamber of deputies, died as the result of wounds received in a duel with another deputy. The duel was the outgrowth of trivial political dispute.

France to Abolish Martial Law.

HOPE DARDANELLES VICTORY IN MONTH

British Admit More "Costly" Efforts Are Needed.

London, Aug. 27.—An official report on recent operations on the Gallipoli peninsula issued set at rest more crediting the British troops with having either cut off or outflanked the Turkish forces.

The report states that while the ground gained is of great value the true objectives have not been reached.

In the first attacks early in the month the Australians and New Zealanders reached the summits of Sari Bahr and Chanak Behr, commanding positions on the west coast of the peninsula, but through the failure of the new landing party at Sulva bay to make the progress expected the troops from the dominions were compelled to fall back. Another attack was made last Saturday, but having lost the advantage of surprise the British could not reach the summit and were compelled to retire again. The report admits heavy British losses and adds that those of the Turks must have been heavier.

"Altogether the British hold a front of twelve miles along the west side of the peninsula, and at some points have penetrated a considerable distance into the interior. The Turks are making a very stubborn defence of their positions, but the allies are confident that with the strong forces at their command and the assistance of the fleet the Dardanelles will be forced before the arrival of the unfavorable weather due toward the end of September."

GERMAN U-BOATS LOST

Several Destroyed in Bombardment of Zebrugge by Allied Warships.

London, Aug. 27.—A Central News despatch from Amsterdam states that the allied warships bombarded the submarine sheds of the Germans at Zebrugge, and destroyed several submarines.

Nearly 100 German soldiers were seriously wounded and a number of others slightly wounded as the result of the bombardment, according to the despatch.

ITALIAN SUBMARINE UNDER WATER FOR SEVENTY HOURS

Given Up as Lost, the Neride Returns Safely to Its Base.

Fraise is being showered upon the crew of the Italian submarine Neride, who through an accident were compelled to remain beneath the surface for seventy hours without food or light and their supply of oxygen almost exhausted before the engines were repaired and the vessel was able to reach her base in safety, greatly to the surprise of naval officials, who believed the craft was lost. Even the ministry of marine accepted the report from Vienna to the effect that the Neride, one of Italy's newer submarines, had been destroyed by an Austrian war vessel.

Hour after hour in the stifling, brain bursting interior of the submarine, without sleep, without rest, they worked. Then the thickening fumes took their toll of the commander, and a subordinate directed the work. The men lost trace of time. Once they obtained a few revolutions of the screw, and a faint, husky cheer used up more of the precious oxygen. But their exhilaration was brief, for the motors stopped again, and the work had to be done all over.

Two more men collapsed and were barely kept alive when the chief engineer, exploring with blind fingers, found the seat of trouble and at length repaired it. The motors started once more. Slowly the shell began to rise from the bottom. The periscope reached the surface and found a clear sea. Out from the water came the hull, and the hatch of the conning tower was opened for the first breath of fresh air in three long days. But it was too late for the three men in collapse below. They died without regaining consciousness. Two more men died on the way to port.

Tripoli's Scottish Admiral.

Tripoli has long had a bad reputation, but reached the zenith of offensiveness a century ago, when its private fleet was organized by a renegade Scotchman, Peter Lyste. Deserting the English ship on which he was mate, Lyste turned Moslem, married a near relation to the reigning pasha and soon rose to the position of lord high admiral of the fleet. He did a deal of mischief, but came to a bad end—London Standard.

PATRIOTS FINISH IN FIFTH PLACE

First Game with Frederick was Delight to the Fans. Second was Recreation worth Twenty Five Dollars to the Treasury.

Safely entrenched in fifth place with four less defeats tallied against her record than the Chambersburg Maroons, Gettysburg closed her first season of organized baseball by dividing a double header with Frederick. The first set-to, in which the locals played one of the best games of the entire season, was won 4 to 0. The second encounter developed into a farce and was won by Frederick 2 to 1. Howard pitched his final game for the Patriots in the opening battle and got sweet revenge for events of weeks long past. He showed the same form he displayed in the memorable eighth inning battle and was at all times master of the situation. Three fast double plays in the first four innings indicated the support he received. Oyster scored Gettysburg's first run in the second inning when he sent a three bagger along the left field foul line and tallied on a passed ball. In the third Howard hit a clean single but was caught at second on Bigler's bunt. Bigler stole second and Boyne drew a pass. Mahaffie sent out a clear one scoring Bigler, and Boyne scored when Whalen threw wild to Barnhart to catch him at third. Mahaffie going to third on the play. Herril was passed and Mahaffie scored when Herril drew a short throw to second.

WEeping SInews.

Various Methods by Which Ganglions May Be Cured.

Physicians use the word ganglion to describe a swelling of the sheath of a tendon which contains fluid and which usually occurs about the wrist. A weeping shew is the same thing. A little swelling forms, and the fluid distends it more and more as it collects. The swelling is elastic and soft. Sometimes it is small and does not cause any trouble, and occasionally it passes away without any treatment. It may yield to long continued gentle pressure, like that which a ribbon band exerts. A well placed ribbon bandage also helps to relieve the feeling of weakness that almost always accompanies a ganglion.

In a few cases the fluid that the ganglion contains is tuberculous, but in most cases the ganglionic swelling is entirely harmless. In tuberculous cases it is best to remove the sheath and its contents completely.

Ganglions are usually seen on the back of the wrist, but sometimes one comes on the front and increases in size. It is then likely to spread down the sinews into the palm of the hand. That naturally cripples the victim more or less, especially since the swelling often gives pain in cold and damp weather.

There are various ways of breaking a weeping shew. Sometimes it can be dispersed by sudden pressure applied by the thumbs, which bursts the ganglion without breaking the skin. It is best then to bandage the part very tightly in order to prevent the little sac from filling up again. The bandage should contain some thin, hard substance, such as a large coin, directly over the site of the sac. Sometimes a ganglion refuses to burst, but yields to tight bandaging combined with treatment by a blister or by painting with iodine. The cure in such cases is effected by gradual absorption. If other means fail there is nothing to do but to open the ganglion and scrape out its contents.—Youth's Companion.

Her ten kittens drowned, Tillie, a New York police station cat, invaded cellars in the neighborhood until she had stolen fifteen other kittens and taken them to station house to replace her lost family.

The great one day strike of New York women planned to show the strength of women in the industrial and business world, has been decided upon at a conference of representatives of thirty women's suffrage and trade organizations.

The strike will be arranged to include 500,000 women workers in New York city, but will extend to many nearby communities and probably more distant localities of New York state.

It will take place around the first of October and will be the forerunner of a nation wide, one day strike of women that will have the same object—to answer the often advanced argument of the anti-suffragists that "woman's place is in the home."

The conference considered the welfare of working girls with families dependent upon them who might lose their positions by joining the strike. It was afterward announced that a fund will be provided to take care of them.

The conference was called by Mrs. Norman de R. Whitehouse, chairman of the publicity committee of the Empire State campaign committee of the combined suffrage organizations and originator of the strike idea.

"There is a tremendous amount of detail to be arranged," said Mrs. Whitehouse. "To insure the success of our plans, which will be more definite in a week or so. There was no question at the conference today but that the strike is desirable in the judgment of the trade and political organizations represented."

GERMANS CHEER BRITONS.

Crew of Trawler Overjoyed When Warship Let Them Go.

German cheers for men in the British navy is the unusual wartime incident reported from the North sea by the captain and crew of the German trawler Gudrun, belonging in Altona, which arrived at Esbjerg.

The captain, relating the experiences of the trawler, said that the Gudrun was stopped in the North sea by a British squadron. He promptly got his boats ready and distributed life belts, believing his ship was certain to be sunk.

When the British seamen reached the trawler the captain begged for time to take to the boats and admits that he was staggered at the short and pointed reply:

"You can take the whole ship. We shall not harm you."

The captain adds that the British left amid the hearty cheers of the greatly relieved Germans.

CROSS TO CANADIAN HERO.

Lieutenant F. W. Campbell, Now Dead, Held Back German Attack.

The Victoria cross has been conferred upon Lieutenant Frederick William Campbell of the First Canadian Battalion for conspicuous bravery, June 15, at Givenchy.

He took two machine guns over a parapet, arrived at the German first line with one gun and maintained his position there under heavy fire after almost the whole of his detachment had been killed or wounded.

The British supply of bombs being exhausted, Lieutenant Campbell advanced the machine gun still further and by firing 1,000 rounds held back the German counterattack.

Lieutenant Campbell, subsequently wounded, has since died.

Condemns Sale of Alcohol.

A committee of "the crusade of the women of France," which committee includes many of the most prominent women in Paris, has passed a resolution condemning the sale of alcoholic beverages in the shops of confectioners, tobacconists and coal merchants and demanding that the sale of intoxicants be prohibited in communities where munitions of war are manufactured.

EDISON FORSEES YEARS OF PLENTY

Inventor Declares Country Is on Verge of Boom.

WAR TO END IN ONE YEAR.

Heavy Immigration at Close of European Conflict Will Help This Country Tremendously, He Thinks—Says Intensive Farming Will Prevail Here on a Much Larger Scale.

In prophetic mood, Thomas A. Edison, famous inventor, sees seven years of fat prosperity ahead of the United States. The years of plenty, Mr. Edison believes, will number even more than seven provided the people do not "overdo things."

"Leaving out entirely the question of war industries," he said, "activities which are simply a hectic flush and do not give a complexion which indicates the healthy advance of commercial enterprises in the United States, I am satisfied this country has embarked upon a seven years' cruise of prosperity."

"But I am afraid it will be the same old story over and over again—some will attempt to overdo it. Then inevitably will come a recurrence of bad times, although not so bad as we have seen them, because business is now established in this country upon a really sound banking system. People can go safely ahead now, with assurance of good times to come, but they must learn to save their money and avoid extravagances."

World Linked Together.

"When the European war is over we are bound to be affected, you must remember, in the re-establishment of business. The world is all locked to gether commercially, and devastation of the countries of Europe by war naturally affects seriously all the other countries of the world, our own included, of course. Notwithstanding this troublesome phase of the future, we are in for a term of commercial prosperity, and if the people do not overdo things it may extend over a long period."

Mr. Edison was asked in what form the prosperity would come. He replied:

"All along the line. Slowly, perhaps, at first, because, as I have stated, the war orders are merely a hectic flush and must not be confused with the general prosperity increasing quite materially along industrial lines not connected with manufacture of war munitions or supplies for the countries at war."

War to Continue Another Year.

"The war will likely continue another year, and at its close undoubtedly, by many survivors will come here to escape the terrible taxes certain to be levied upon them. But there remains plenty of land uncultivated in this country, and these people, accustomed to intensive farming, will assist us to increase our crops. And that's what we need—intensive farmers. Where we are getting fifteen bushels to the acre we ought to get forty. These European farmers can produce the large amounts too."

Mr. Edison said the huge crops raised in the United States this summer had improved business already and that manufacturers had many more men at work now than a year ago and were daily adding to the number.

CURE FOR RHEUMATISM.

Farmhouse Damaged by Lightning, but Invalid Gets Rid of Her Pains.

The medical faculty was put to shame by a bolt of lightning which struck the farmhouse of Charles A. Burdick at Berlin, Conn. The electric bolt destroyed articles in all the eight rooms of the house and did damage exceeding $1,000, but it cured Mrs. Burdick of rheumatism, from which she had suffered for many years.

Mrs. Burdick was about to put wood in the kitchen stove when the bolt struck her, knocking her down and rendering her unconscious. One of her feet was on zinc beneath the stove. The lightning took a nail out of the sole of her shoe, and her foot was burned severely. Dr. Thomas Mulligan of New Britain soon revived her.

Now Mrs. Burdick, although suffering from the burns on her foot, is free from rheumatic pains. She does not think the price her husband must

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Cazalet, on the steamer Kaiser Fritz homeward bound from Australia, cries out in his sleep that Henry Craven, who ten years before had ruined his father and himself, is dead and finds that Hilton Toye, who shares the state-room with him, knows Craven and also Blanche Macnair, a former neighbor and playmate.

CHAPTER II—When the daily papers come aboard at Southampton Toye reads that Craven has been murdered and calls Cazalet's dream second sight. He thinks of doing a little amateur detective work on the case himself.

CHAPTER III—In the train to town Cazalet and Toye discuss the murder, which was committed at Cazalet's old home. Toye hears from Cazalet that Scruton, who had been Cazalet's friend and the scapegoat for Craven's dishonesty, has been released from prison.

CHAPTER IV—Cazalet goes down the river and meets Blanche.

CHAPTER V—Toye also comes to see Blanche and tells Cazalet that Scruton has been arrested, but as he doesn't believe the old clerk is guilty he is going to ferret out the murderer.

CHAPTER VI—Cazalet and Blanche go to Cazalet's old home and meet Mr. Drinkwater of Scotland Yard.

CHAPTER VII—Cazalet goes with Drinkwater to the Blue House where the murder was committed for Craven's sake and passage he knew of as a boy, and leads the way through it.

CHAPTER VIII.

Finger-Prints.

Hilton Toye was the kind of American who knew London as well as most Londoners, and some other capitals a good deal better than their respective citizens of corresponding intelligence. His travels were mysteriously but not unaccountably interwoven with business; he had an air of enjoying himself, and at the same time making money to pay for his enjoyment, wherever he went. His hotel days were much the same all over Europe: many appointments, but abundant leisure. As, however, he never spoke about his own affairs unless they were also those of the listener—and not always then—half his acquaintances had no idea how he made his money, and the other half wondered how he spent his time. Of his mere interests, which were many, Toye made no such secret; but it was quite impossible to deduce a main industry from the by-products of his level-headed versatility.

Criminology, for example, was an obvious by-product; it was no morbid taste in Hilton Toye, but a scientific hobby that appealed to his mental subtlety. And subtle he was, yet with strange simplifications, grave and dignified, yet addicted to the expressive phraseology of his less enlightened countrymen; naturally sincere, and yet always capable of some ingenious duplicity.

The appeal of a Blanche Macnair to such a soul needs no analysis. She had struck through all complexities to the core, such as it was or as she might make it. As yet she could only admire the character the map had shown, though it had upset her none the less. At Emsworth he had proposed to her "inside of two weeks," and she had admitted without compunction at the time. It had taken him, he said, about two minutes to make up his mind; but the following summer he had laid more deliberate siege, in accordance with some old idea that she had let fall to soften her first refusal. The result had been the same, only more explicit on both sides. She had denied him the least particle of hope, and he had warned her that she had not heard the last of him by any means, and never would till she married another man. This had incensed her at the time, but a great deal less on subsequent reflection; and such was the position between that pair when Toye and Cazalet landed in England from the same steamer.

On this second day ashore, as Cazalet sat over a late breakfast in Jermyn street, Toye sent in his card and was permitted to follow it, rather to his surprise. He found his man frankly divided between kidneys and bacon and the morning paper, but in a hearty mood, indicative of amends for his great heat in yesterday's argument. A plainer indication was the downright yet sunny manner in which Cazalet at once returned to the contentious topic.

"Well, my dear Toye, what do you think of it now?"

"I was going to ask you what you thought, but I guess I can see from your face."

"I think the police are rotters for not setting him free last night!"

"Scruton?"

"Yes. Of course, the case'll break down when it comes on next week, but they oughtn't to wait for that. They've no right to detain a man in custody when the bottom's out of their case already."

"But—but the papers claim they've found the very things they were searching for." Toye looked nonplussed, as well he might, by an apparently perverse jubilation over such intelligence.

"They haven't found the missing cap!" cried Cazalet. "What they have found is Craven's watch and keys, and the silver-mounted truncheon that killed him. But they found them in a place where they couldn't possibly have been put by the man identified as Scruton!"

"Say, where was that?" asked Toye with great interest. "My paper only says the things were found, not

"They Haven't Found the Missing Cap!" Cried Cazalet.

"No more does mine, but I can tell you, because I helped to find 'em."

"You don't say!"

"You'll never grasp where," continued Cazalet. "In the foundations under the house!"

Details followed in all fullness; the listener might have had a part in the Uplands act of yesterday's drama, might have played in the library scene with his adored Miss Blanche, so vividly was every minute of that crowded hour brought home to him. He was not so sure that he had any very definite conception of the foundations of an English house.

"Ours were like ever so many little tiny rooms," said Cazalet, "where I couldn't stand nearly upright even as a small boy without giving my head a crack against the ground floors. They led into one another by a lot of little manholes—tight fits even for a boy, but nearly fatal to the boss policeman yesterday!"

Hilton Toye, edging in his word, said he guessed he visualized—but just where had those missing things been found?

"Three or four compartments from the first one under the library," said Cazalet.

"Did you find them?"

"Well, I kicked against the truncheon, but Drinkwater dug it up. The watch and keys were with it."

"Say, were they buried?"

"Only in the loose rubble and brick-dusty stuff that you get in foundations."

"Say, that's bad! That murderer must have known something, or else it's a bully fluke in his favor."

"I don't follow you, Toye."

"I'm thinking of finger-prints. It held justice laid those things right down, he'd have left the print of his fingers in it at Scotland Yard."

"The devil he would!" exclaimed Cazalet. "I wish you'd explain," he added; "remember I'm a wild man from the woods, and only know of these things by the vaguest kind of hearsay and stray paragraphs in the papers. I never knew you could leave your mark so easily as all that."

Toye took the breakfast menu and placed it face downward on the tablecloth. "Lay your hand on that, palm down," he said, "and don't move it for a minute."

Cazalet looked at him a moment before complying; then his fine, shapely, sunburnt hand lay still as plaster under their eyes until Toye told him he might take it up. Of course there was no mark whatever, and Cazalet laughed.

"You should have caught me when I came up from those foundations, not fresh from my tub!" said he.

"You wait," replied Hilton Toye, taking the menu gingerly by the edge, and putting it out of harm's way in the empty toast-rack. "You can't see anything now, but if you come round to the Savoy I'll show you something."

"What?"

"Your prints, sir! I don't say I'm Scotland Yard at the game, but I can do it well enough to show you how it's done. You haven't left your mark upon the paper, but I guess you've left the sweat of your hand; if I show a little French chalk over it, the chalk'll stick where your hand did, and blow off easily everywhere else. Say, come round to lunch and I'll have your prints ready for you. I'd like awfully to show you how it's done."

Cazalet excused himself with decision. He had a full morning in front of him. He was going to see Miss Macnair's brother, son of the late head of his father's old firm of solicitors, and now one of the partners, to get them either to take up Scruton's case themselves, or else to recommend a firm perhaps more accustomed to criminal practice. Cazalet was always apt to be elaborate in the first person singular, either in the past or in the future tense; but he was more so than usual in explaining his considered intentions in this matter that lay so very near his heart.

"Going to see Scruton, too?" said Toye.

"Not necessarily," was the short reply. But it also was elaborated by cazaleet on a moment's consideration. The fact was that he wanted first to know if it were not possible, by the intervention of a really influential lawyer, to obtain the prisoner's immediate release, at any rate on bail. If impossible, he might hesitate to force himself on Scruton in the prison, but he would see.

"It's a perfect scandal that he should be there at all," said Cazalet, as he rose first and ushered Toye out into the lounge. "Only think: our old gardener saw him run out of the drive at half past seven, when the gong went, when the real murderer must have been shivering in the Michael Angelo cupboard, wondering how the devil he was ever going to get out again."

"Then you think old man Craven—bearing his poor pardon—was getting out some cigars when the man, whoever he was, came in and knocked him on the head?"

Cazalet nodded vigorously. "That's the likeliest thing of all!" he cried. "Then the gong went—there may even have come a knock at the door—and there was that cupboard standing open at his elbow."

"With a hole in the floor that might have been made for him?"

"As it happens, yes; he'd search every inch like a rat in a trap, you see; and there it was as I'd left it twenty years before."

"Well, it's a wonderful yarn!" exclaimed Hilton Toye, and he lighted the cigar that Cazalet had given him.

"I think it may be thought one if the police ever own how they made their find," agreed Cazalet, laughing and looking at his watch. Toye had never heard him laugh so often. "By the way, Drinkwater doesn't want any of all this to come out until he's dragged his man before the beak again."

"Which you mean to prevent?"

"If only I can! I more or less promised not to talk, however, and I'm sure you won't. You knew so much already, you may just as well know the rest this week as well as next, if you don't mind keeping it to your self."

Nobody could have minded this particular embargo less than Hilton Toye. He saw Cazalet off with a smile that was as yet merely puzzled, and not unfriendly until he had time to recall Miss Blanche's part in the strange affair of the previous afternoon.

Say, weren't they rather intimate, those two, even if they had known each other all their lives? He had it from Blanche (with her second refusal) that she was not, and never had been, engaged. And a fellow who only wrote to her once in a year—still, they must have been darned intimate, and this funny affair would bring them together again quicker than anything.

Say, what a funny affair it was when you came to think of it! Funny all through, it now struck Toye, beginning on board ship with that dream of Cazalet's about the murdered man, leading to all that talk of the cold resistance against him, and culminating in his actually finding the implements of the crime in his inspired efforts to save the man of whose innocence he was so positive. Say, if that Cazalet had not been on his way home from Australia at the time!

Like many deliberate speakers, Toye thought like lightning, and had reached this point before he was a hundred yards from the hotel; then he thought of something else, and retraced his steps. He retraced them even to the table at which he had sat with Cazalet not very many minutes ago; the waiter was only now beginning to clear away.

"Say, waiter, what have you done with the menu that was in that toast-rack? There was something on it that we rather wanted to keep."

"I thought there was, sir," said the English waiter at that admirable hotel. Toye, however, prepared to talk to him like an American uncle of Dutch extraction.

"You thought that, and you took it away?"

"Not at all, sir. I appeared to observe the other gentleman put the menu in his pocket, behind your back as you were getting up, because I passed a remark about it to the head waiter at the time!"

RAPS WOOD FOR T. R.'S SPEECH

Garrison Warns Commander of Plattsburg Camp.

DEFEATS AIM, HE SAYS

Declares Nothing Could Have Been More Detrimental to Camp's Usefulness Than Colonel's Utterances.

Washington, Aug. 27.—Secretary Garrison telegraphed Major General Leonard Wood expressing his deprecation that opportunity was given at the citizen soldiery camp at Plattsburg, N. Y., for Colonel Roosevelt's sensational speech of Wednesday and directing nothing similar should be permitted at any of the other camps.

Secretary Garrison referred to Colonel Roosevelt's remarks on the military unpreparedness of the country and the attitude of the administration. His telegram to General Wood follows:

"I have just seen the report in the newspapers of the speech made by ex-President Roosevelt at the Plattsburg camp. It is difficult to conceive of anything which could have a more detrimental effect upon the real value of this experiment than such an incident.

"This camp, held under government auspices, has successfully demonstrated many things of great moment. Its virtue consisted in the fact that it conveyed its own impressive lessons in its practical and successful operations and results.

"No opportunity should have been furnished to any one to present to the men any matter excepting that which was essential to the necessary training they were there to receive. Anything else could only have the effect of distracting attention from the real nature of the experiment, diverting consideration to issues which excite controversy, antagonism and ill-feeling and thereby impairing if not destroying what otherwise would have been so effective.

"There must not be any opportunity given at Plattsburg or at any other similar camp for any such unfortunate consequences."

Secretary Garrison said he had no further action now under contemplation. He said he had not discussed the matter with President Wilson and had no knowledge of the president's views. The secretary said he had not considered whether his telegram to General Wood would have any effect upon the general's record.

At the same time, Secretary Garrison made public a portion of a letter from General Wood explaining the general's own speech on August 14, which attracted much attention, and which was called to the notice of the war department. The general's explanation of his own remarks was satisfactory to the war department.

The secretary said he had just read the letter today on his return from his brief vacation at Seabright, N. J.

P. O. S. OF A PARADE

11,000 Men and Fifty Bands in Line at Reading.

Reading, Aug. 27.—The meeting of the state camp of the Sons of America was concluded with the greatest parade Reading has ever witnessed.

More than 11,000 men were in line. The organizations came from 100 cities and towns and villages from all over eastern Pennsylvania. Philadelphia was represented by a large delegation. There were fifty bands and twenty floats. The entire parade was most picturesque and of a patriotic spirit.

At the concluding business session of the state camp the newly elected officers were installed.

Resolutions passed include one for the purchase of property adjoining the Betsy Ross American Flag House in Philadelphia, so as to insure it from destruction by fire.

HAYTIANS FIRE ON AMERICAN PATROL

No Casualties Reported in Port au Prince Attack.

Washington, Aug. 27.—Haytians fired on the American patrol in Port au Prince, Admiral Caperton notified the navy department.

No mention was made of casualties. Officials believed the trouble was quickly put down, or the admiral would have sent further particulars. A band of Cacos, the northern tribesmen who are giving the American authorities trouble, invaded Port de Paix but did not start any trouble.

Action by the Haytian parliament on the treaty submitted by the United States proposing the establishment for ten years of an American financial protectorate over the island republic, was awaited by administration officials. The American charge at Port au Prince had set noon Wednesday as the time for approval of the treaty, but the Haytians protested against limiting debate, and the time was extended.

One of the reasons given why the United States has taken its present strong position is the fear that German capital was hopeful of exploiting Hayti after the present war. Rumors have reached this government from Haytian sources that certain Haytian leaders have been advocating large concessions to Germany in the hope that nation would establish a virtual protectorate over the republic. It is to prevent any such attempt, it is said, that the convention proposed by the United States gives this government the right to veto any territorial concessions.

New Destroyer Launched.

Philadelphia, Aug. 27.—The torpedo boat destroyer Porter, named for Admiral David Dixon Porter, one of the naval heroes of the Civil war, who also fought in the Mexican war, was launched at Cramp's shipyard. Little Miss Georgianna Porter B. Cusachs, 11 years old, granddaughter of the admiral and a daughter of Prof. Carlo Z. Cusachs, an instructor at the Naval Academy at Annapolis, christened the ship.

Before using solder it is a good thing to test it in order to find out whether or not it is of good quality. To do this hold it near the ear and bend it back and forth. In doing this if it makes a crackling noise it is an indication that it is good solder; if it does not, it shows that there is too much lead and not enough tin in it.

Inspect Brake Cable.

Cable wires on the brake should have frequent inspections. If a single strand of this wire breaks the rest ravel out very quickly. This is especially true at places where the cable passes through or around the sheave.

A Turkish Custom.

Upon the graves of the dead in the Turkish cemeteries little vessels of water are placed for the benefit of the birds, and some of the marble tombs have basins chiseled out for the same purpose, the superstition being that birds carry messages about the living to the dead and like everything else in Turkey, are suspected of being spiteful unless something is done to curry their favor.

POPULAR MECHANICS

Care In Making Cannon.

The field gun proper is made of nickel steel, of about 90,000 pounds per square inch tensile strength. The inspection and specifications for the forgings are most rigid, and the slightest flaw developing at any stage of manufacture is usually sufficient cause for rejecting the forging, or for special proof firing with excessive pressures at the risk of the maker after the gun is completed. An experienced manufacturer may not have many rejected forgings, but without exceptionally good fortune an inexperienced maker may count on 25 per cent or more of rejections. This extreme care does not appear unreasonable when it is considered that the gun must withstand a suddenly applied interior pressure of perhaps 35,000 pounds to the square inch, which at each firing stresses some portion of the gun to perhaps 70 per cent of its elastic limit. A gun failure is of serious moment, for aside from the death or injury of the detachment the moral effect on other detachments is bad.—Engineering Magazine.

Effect of Pure Boiler Water.

Perfectly pure water has always been regarded as just as bad for steam boilers as water containing great quantities of solids. Indeed, many have gone so far as to say that it is even worse, because perfectly pure water pits the metal and therefore permanently damages it, while no permanent damage need occur because of the deposit of solids. Investigation so far apparently shows that perfectly pure water has no effect upon properly made boiler steel except for a slight dissolving action, so slight in fact that it need not be considered in connection with the longest lived boiler on record or to be expected. The pitting action ascribed to perfectly pure water seems to be due to dissolved carbon dioxide and to depend upon it alone.—Engineering Magazine.

Floating Boat Landing.

Where the tide rises and falls the float shown makes a convenient landing for a small boat, says Popular Mechanics. Four posts are set, one at each corner of a suitable sized platform, allowing some space to make the platform free. The structure should be built near a dock or stationary barge landing. Make up the platform strongly and bend a loop of heavy iron rod around each post and flatten the ends for bolt holes. Drill two holes in each end for bolts and fasten them to the platform.

Steps or a stairway are constructed and hinged to the dock so that the lower end will rise and fall with the movements of the platform.

Uses For the Old Motor.

An old automobile motor that had about served its usefulness in the car was recently installed in a garage to serve as a power plant for operating the different tools. It was overhauled and fitted with new piston rings and bearings and mounted on a good foundation. A belt from the flywheel was run to an overhead line shaft, from which the power was taken for the machines. The owner of the garage saved himself considerable investment by using this old engine. Blacksmiths who have old motors of this kind can use them to good advantage in this way. By installing them in farm power houses they can be used for driving many different kinds of machines.—Blacksmith and Wheelwright.

Mirror to Warn Autoists.

Flashing a clear reflection of one of the most dangerous curves in western Pennsylvania, a plate glass mirror, 30 by 48 inches, has been placed at the top of the Logan's Ferry hill by the new Kensington Automobile club near Pittsburgh. The mirror is firmly set in a heavy wooden frame and is mounted so that automobile drivers may see the curve they are approaching for a distance of fully 400 feet, thus giving them ample warning of an approaching car. Drivers say the reflection of the headlights at night make the mirror of even greater value than during the day.

USES FOR TOMATOES.

RIPE Tomato Preserves.—Ripe tomatoes for preserving should have the skins removed by having them plunged for a few minutes into boiling water. Cover eight pounds of ripe fruit, cut in halves or in quarters, with seven pounds of granulated sugar, and set aside overnight. In the morning a sirup will be formed. Put this on to boil until it is clear, skimming off the foam which rises. This skimming is necessary in order to have a transparent sirup and must be done, of course, in all sugar sirups. Now put in the tomatoes and let them simmer for twenty minutes or so. Then drain them out and pack into jars which have been carefully sterilized. Then let the sirup continue to boil until it is rich and thick. Just before taking out add to the hot sirup the juice of three or four lemons, depending on the size of the lemons, the proportion being about one lemon to every two pounds of preserves. Don't add the rind. Now pour the sirup over the fruit in the jars and seal. Caps and covers, of course, should be sterilized as well as the jars.

Green Tomato Preserves.—Small, uniform sized green tomatoes make the best looking preserves for this, and they are most attractive when cooked without being either peeled or cut up. To eight pounds of fruit measured into the preserving kettle add seven pounds of sugar and a little cold water. If you don't want a preserve that is very sweet and very rich you may add water enough to cover. Add also three or four lemons cut in slices, peel and all, except seeds, and let the preserves boil gently for about

PRETTY NIGHT GOWN IN KIMONO STYLE.

A novel design for a nightgown. It is made in kimono effect and gathered into a band at Empire waist-line, with a straight ruffle.

It has become quite the perfunctory thing for lingerie to be fashioned after outer garments, hence the introduction of the peplum effect upon this kimono nightgown of fine nainsook. The neck is finished in round outline, eyelets being embroidered below the band for the accommodation of narrow ribbon. This treatment is repeated on the short sleeves. The embroidery on the front of the gown is done in eyelet and satin stitch.

To make the gown for a person of average size requires 4 1/2 yards 36-inch material, with 1 1/2 yard heading for the waist, 2 yards of 1 1/2-inch wide ribbon.

three hours. An ounce of preserved ginger and a teaspoonful of ground mace may be added. This must not cook too fast; one must simmer it very gently. Pack in sterilized jars.
Tomatoes With Sauce.—Cut in rather thick slices without peeling, then roll them in flour and fry in butter, salting and peppering them as you fry. Turn with a griddle cake turner, and when both sides are done take out and lay on a hot platter. Now pour milk slowly on the flour left in the pan, stir continually to prevent lumps, brown and pour the sauce this made over the tomatoes and serve.

LIKE A MONEY TREE.

Simple and Profitable Scheme of a Kongo Trading Company.

The possibilities of a really enterprising trading company are realized at Kiliku, central Africa, where the Kongo Oriental company owns all stores, where money can be spent and fixes its own prices for ivory, rubber, labor and trade goods. "It was as if by planting a few frames in the ground money bearing trees had sprung into existence." The lucrative procedure is explained in James Barnes' "Through Central Africa."

"As soon as a native was paid cash for anything, either as an advance or for services rendered, he hastened hither to the company's stores and bought anything from a harmonicon to a secondhand gold braided uniform, and as the profit in these articles ran from 100 to 250 per cent it can easily be seen where the money trees come in. "The man who had brought in ivory was paid for it in cash at a rate that insured a profit of about 150 per cent, and immediately he repaired to the store, where he bought things he had no use for, giving another profit of cent per cent at least. The money was sent from the store to the company's offices, where the native was paid for carrying the ivory on the first stage of its long journey to the coast. The money received was the same that had been paid for the ivory in the first place, and the bearer would surely come back and spend his wages at the store again.

"It was a lovely system, and the only real chance for loss was the wear and tear on the money itself and the expense of bookkeeping. If the native demanded an extra price for ivory or labor there was very little trouble made over it—the extra cost was added to the articles in the store."

THE SECRET WORD

Our War Department Has About the Best Code in Existence.

SIMPLE, FLEXIBLE AND RAPID

The Navy Has a Cipher of Its Own, as Has Also the Department of State. One of the Codes Used by England For Unimportant Messages.

The United States government employs probably more different kinds of codes than any other power. The war department has one of its own. The navy uses a separate and distinct system. The code book of key of the navy cipher is kept always in a canvas bag, which is lined with zinc and heavily weighted. The bag is in the personal custody of the commanding officer of the ship, who has orders never to let it get away from him, but to throw it overboard in the event of capture by an enemy. The advent of wireless telegraphy has made this precaution doubly necessary, for the solution of an enemy's cipher in time of war might easily turn the scales of victory.

The only naval code book ever captured by an enemy was the one carried by the Chesapeake in the war of 1812. The commander of the Chesapeake, Captain Lawrence, was wounded early in the battle, and no one else knew where the code book was kept. When the frigate surrendered the British found the code behind a sliding panel, and the book is now in the British museum.

The cipher of the war department is very simple in its nature and by virtue of this simplicity, ease of operation, inscrutability and rapidity with which a new key can be substituted is said to hold first place among the military ciphers of the world. Army officers who have used other codes say that none of them compares to this one.

This cipher may in a general way be described as an ingenious method of distorting the order of words in a message and further obscuring the meaning by the systematic introduction of irrelevant words and meaningless names. The variety of distortions is great, and whenever a copy of the cipher is captured another cipher can be communicated in a very short time to all those who should have it.

A simple and ingenious naval cipher was invented by Captain Charles Morris for the use of the American navy during the war of 1812 and has been utilized by the navy department, with modifications, ever since. The principle is applicable alike to flag ciphers or numerical ciphers transmitted by telegraph or wireless.

Captain Morris in a hand written signal book bound by him in 1811 stated: A circumstance may sometimes render it desirable to change the signification of the flags or the numbers, expressed by them. The following method should therefore be adopted:

Let each day of the week be inserted in the signal book opposite a number. To each of these days affix a certain number, which is always to be communicated to the proper person in charge of the signal. The following list is an example, changed by the cipher book.

Sunday	1
Monday	2
Tuesday	3
Wednesday	4
Thursday	5
Friday	6
Saturday	7

Before commencing your communication insert the number corresponding to the day you wish to use. This will signify to the person who is to read the signal that he is to add the number corresponding to that day to all signals that may be made. The person sending the signal will subtract the same number from all signals. By this means an enemy's knowledge of your ordinary signals might really be converted to his disadvantage instead of the benefit which he might promise himself from them.

While nobody could tell you today the code used by any power in transmitting important and vital news and instructions, some of the more ordinary ciphers have been discovered. For instance, one of the simplest of all official ciphers is that used by the British foreign office for the transmission of comparatively unimportant messages, the cipher being too well known to risk detection when there is much at stake.

The letters of the alphabet are arranged in the form of a square:

f	g	h	i	j
k	l	m	n	o
u	v	w	x	y

Each letter is then represented by two numerals. Thus A would be 11. D would be 41. R would be 34, and so on. The letter Z, which has to be omitted from the cipher because of the fact that there are twenty-six letters in the alphabet, is represented by 6 while the same symbol is used to separate words.

Thus in "Rush arms to Zanzibar" the cipher would be:

This cipher has the advantage of almost infinite variety, as by changing the arrangement of the numerals one may easily baffle a chance recipient of the message, while the person for whom the cipher is intended would have no trouble in reading it.—James Hay, Jr., in Every Week.

A Trap and a Confession

By EUNICE BLAKE

"I understand, Billy, that your engagement with Ida Trask is broken?"

"It is."

There was a brief silence between the two men, when Billy Staples said: "Ida sent me off."

This was all the information any one ever got out of Mr. Staples. There is a story connected with his dismissal that puts the matter in a different light.

Miss Trask was one of a house party given in the autumn, and of course Billy was invited too. Edith Storms, one of the girls of the party, was sitting on the porch with Billy and said to him:

"I'm tired of riding, and I wish we did more walking. Nothing delights me so much as to start out on a brisk walk in cool autumn weather, when the leaves are turning. I love to kick up the leaves drying on the ground."

"I will be most happy to be your companion for a walk," said Billy gallantly.

"Ida might not like it."

"I see no reason why she should object."

"Nevertheless it would be just as well if she did not see us go away together. She's in the library playing cards."

"I'm perfectly willing she should see us."

They started off and were soon in the woods, kicking up the fallen leaves. Miss Storms coming to a secluded spot did not seem as desirous of walking as she had claimed. A branch of a tree growing very near the ground and parallel to it formed a convenient seat. Miss Storms sat down, leaving room for her companion to sit beside her. He did so, and the two chatted for awhile on the scenic beauty of the spot and the stillness, the lady remarking that it was just the place for a proposal, whereupon the gentleman said that he would be happy to accommodate her if he were not already engaged.

Miss Storms leaned forward, exposing a shapely waist. Billy resisted a temptation to drop an arm upon it, but when she turned her face toward him with her lips very near his he gave it up. He kissed her.

The temptress rose and walked away, Billy following her. He couldn't tell whether she was offended or hurt or conscience-stricken. Their walk back to the house was in silence, and when they reached it the girl went immediately to her room.

That evening Miss Trask intimated that she would like a "trap and a confession."

Constitution Island.

Constitution Island is in the Hudson river opposite West Point. The island comprises 300 acres densely wooded. During the Revolution it formed part of the defenses of the Hudson river. Upon it are the remains of ten breastworks. These were completed by Kosciuszko. Washington's life guard was mustered out on this island in 1780. Miss Anna Bartlett Warner, its owner, and Mrs. Russell Sage in 1905 made a gift of the island to the government of the United States, and it is now a part of the military reservation.

Roundabout Bribery.

At one old time British election a candidate won by means of an umbrella. Sheer absence of mind caused him to leave the camp behind at every house at which he called to canvass, and of course when it was returned by the voter a sovereign was only a suitable reward for honesty.

The Reason.

"That man over there is after your scalp."

"Good gracious! What do you mean?"

"He's a hair raising specialist and wants customers."—Baltimore American.

tion with her fiance. They went into one of the little parlors on the main floor, and when seated the lady said: "I saw you go to walk this afternoon with Edith Storms. Do you think it just the thing to take walks in the woods with one girl when you are engaged to another?"

"I see no harm in it."

"There is no harm provided nothing occurs that is harmful."

Billy made no reply to this.

"If you assure me that nothing harmful occurred I have nothing further to say."

Billy pondered as to his answer, then said, "Ask Edith." Then, rising, he left the room.

She met her fiance in the hall the next morning, and handing him a note she passed on. The note was simply a breaking of their engagement.

Edith Storms, on seeing Billy shortly after this dismissal, indicated that she would like to speak to him alone. Billy gave her an opportunity, but maintained a reserve.

"Why did you send Ida to me about what happened yesterday?" she asked. "Because it is the woman's privilege to answer all such questions."

"Could you not have saved yourself by—"

"A lie? No."

"You compelled me to accuse you of taking a kiss without my consent."

"I don't see how you could have otherwise defended yourself."

"But this reflected on you."

"I shall have to bear the imputation."

"Has Ida broken with you?"

"Yes."

Miss Storms did not seem quite satisfied and showed her dissatisfaction. She toyed with a bangle on her arm, then with a string of beads around her neck.

"What makes me feel unpleasant," she said presently, "is that I don't wish you to think that I wish to take you away from Ida. Indeed, I am pre-occupied in that."

"Don't give yourself any concern that I should think you are in love with me."

There was something cutting in this that called a slight flush to her cheek.

"All the blame of this affair," she said, "falls on me. I'm not going to bear it. I'll tell you the whole story if you will agree to drop the matter."

"Tell it. I have no reason to follow it up."

"It seems very wrong of me, but I shall feel better after having made an explanation. Ida has recently met a man with whom she has fallen desperately in love. She wanted a reason to break with you and—"

"Never mind the rest. What you have told me will never pass my lips."

"You forgive me?"

"Certainly."

But he never forgave the girl who had broken with him.
